NEW ALARM FOR POPE

FEAR PONTIFF HAS PNEUMONIA

BULLETIN

Pope has suffered an alarming increase of temperature. He has grown very restless and shows every sign of being in great distress, which has led to fear that the tendencies toward pneumonia are developing. The Swiss Guards about the Vatican, and especially near the Pope's bedchamber, have been doubled. Two beds have been placed in the ante chambers of the Pope's apartments for additional night watchers.

ROME, April 14.—A high church dignitary, long an intimate of Pope Pius, late this afternoon said that those within the Vatican did not expect the Pope to survive the day.

Today there was no trace of albuminuria, and Professor Marchisava said the kidney trouble is entirely gone. Despite the coughing, the heart action is no weaker, and the physicians now are wholly concerned with the Pope's lungs.

"GENERAL CONDITION IS GOOD."

The Vatican physicians—Prof. Dottor Marchisava and Dr. Andrea Amici—issued this bulletin last forenoon:

"The Pope passed the night tranquilly and his general condition is good."

The doctors had their first professional difference today. Amici wanted to publish the Pope's passing of the night, and Marchisava refused to allow it. He named the senior physician, he carried his point.

Fear has increased that the Pope's lungs are affected, and there is the possibility that pneumonia would have with the aged Pontiff. This fear has arisen from a slight trace of blood

Professor Marchleva, on leaving the Pope's apartments at 1:35 P. M., after the Pope had been examined, said: "I now really trust that the Pope's illness will have a favorable solution if it is possible to induce the patient to eat and drink."

From the bulletins issued by Doctors Marchleva and Amici, local physicians expressed belief that the crisis in the Pope's condition would be reached within twenty-four hours.

Dr. Amici and the two sisters of the Pepe remained at the residence all night. One of them left and the other remained until 6 o'clock. Her face was drawn and she shivered from her long vigil and her grief.

Passed a Good Night.

She said that while the Pope had spent a good night his sleep was broken from a great deal of weeping, arising from natural affliction.

At noon the papal secretaries and the cardinals of the Curia visited Cardinal Meyer at New York.

They were informed that Doctors

Before yesterday, waited examination before U. S. Commissioner Hayes as a fugitive from justice and was held in $2,000 for the New York court but also pleaded insanity, of some who are being kept in a room at that city. Hospitalized in the city of New York, New York to the sum of $2,000 three years ago and Federal officers have since been searching for him.

POPE MISSING BOY.

The police of the Dudley square station have been asked to find five-year-old Alexander Phillips, who is missing from his home at 115 West 11th Avenue, Hoboken, since 6 o'clock this morning.

MORGAN BURIED AT HARTFORD IN FAMILY VAULT

HARTFORD, Ct., April 14.—Attended by every outward mark of honor and respect, with schools and colleges closed, business generally suspended, and in half-holiday, church altars glowing with his favorite hymns and the five bells tolling the years of his age, the body of John Pierpont Morgan came back to his native city this afternoon on a special train, which arrived about 2:30.
Thousands of citizens assembled along the streets and paid tribute to Hartford's greatest son as the procession passed up Asylum street, past the small hotel where the funeral was held seven-and-a-half years ago next Thursday.
Traffic was ordered to one side of Main street, down which throughout the body was borne, so that it might pass the beautiful Roman monument which the son erected to honor his father, Justice Pierpont Morgan.

CASSIDY PAYS TRIBUTE TO BOSTON CATERERS WHO EXPOSED ROTTEN EGGS

Mr. Cassidy today pays a tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Madeline, the Back Bay caterers, who by their public exposure of rotten eggs, have done much to expose the rotten eggs in the catering business.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.
The Suffolk Grand Jury is still investigating the egg trade in Boston, and their decision will be of great importance to the public.

When I understand an investigation of the traffic in liquid eggs, I know it would be impossible for the probability to purchase eggs from any of the dealers. They would be sure to get the rotten eggs.

It was necessary to secure a caterer or baker of substantial reputation to purchase the eggs for me, and I was introduced to Mrs. Madeline.

She had never heard of Morris Brown or the Western Egg Company, the firm from whom I wanted her to purchase eggs, but she said Mr. Madeline agreed to purchase eggs from these firms so that I might get complete for analysis.

Before I completed the arrangement, I inquired the Madeline establishment, subsequently, and afterwards, while the eggs were being delivered, I was in the bakery daily.

Found Standard High.
The materials and the methods employed there were of a standard above any I had seen before.

The eggs used for luncheon were bought to special carts, direct from a farm, and at that time, early in February, Mr. Madeline was selling thirty-five cents a dozen for these in contrast.

The best fresh eggs in the stores could have been bought at about the same price.

It was the same with the other materials used. So far as I saw, everything was of the highest possible standard. The cream was heavy—30 to 35 per cent. butter fat. I should say. The auto, sugar, spices, flavor and other ingredients were of the best possible kind.

What I say will not surprise the regular customers of this caterer, for he has built up a reputation for the finest families in the Back Bay. But Mr. and Mrs. Madeline deserve the thanks also of every person in Greater Boston who doesn't want to eat cake with rotten eggs in it—for they helped to stop the manufacture of cake of that sort.

Mr. Madeline gave freely of his time in writing me up the statements of eggs in his. He furnished tea and porridge and wine and juice and the other necessary things. He ordered for me the cake and the tubs in which the samples were

Diplomats Need Not Drink, Declares Secretary Bryan

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.—A severe arraignment of drinking and gambling was the striking feature of the address of Secretary of State Bryan at the Reformed Evangelical Church, "standing," declared Mr. Bryan, "the more democratic than drink and gambling to defeat. The gold cure may take the form of liquor or of a man, but only one can take the cure of gambling and of a man's life. During my long career, including more than a quarter of a century in active politics, there has been but one day when I thought it better to take a drink of alcoholic liquor, even in moderate degree.

'PORTIA' FILES NEW SUIT FOR 'ALIENATION'

Mrs. Mary D. Channell, the central figure in a "Wedded and Parted" story in real life, has begun another chapter in her spectacular career since her husband, Wm. D. Channell, a Haverhill clubman, left her at the door of the church just after they were married. Mrs. Channell has filed another $25,000 alienation suit against Attorney Charles E. Goodwin of Haverhill, and it is expected she will act as her own attorney when the case comes to trial in the Salem Superior Court.

In this last suit, which is filed at Salem, the wife charges Attorney Goodwin with alienating the affections of her husband. She alleges the lawyer persuaded the husband to leave her and remain away.

Mrs. Channell has already gained judgment in Essex County at a modern Perils. Following her marriage to Channell, with whom she has never lived, the wife has appeared in the Essex courts a number of times, both as plaintiff and defendant. She won fame for her able handling of her own case.

The wife's first alienation suit against Attorney Goodwin was filed five years ago. This was for $10,000.

"I acted as my counsel in this suit," says Mrs. Channell. "The verdict was for the defendant."

RADCLIFFE GIRL TELS OF WORK AS INSPECTOR

Lillian H. Smith, a Radcliffe College sophomore, has completed an investigation of Boston markets for the Women's Municipal League. She believes this campaign for cleanliness, undertaken with a girl companion, has not been without results. Miss Smith says of her investigation:

"Mysterious disappearances of two Radcliffe girls. Were last seen entering a shop on Harrison avenue. Angry fathers blame League for forcing this action of the city! Found only trace of missing girls?"

Everywhere a hostile atmosphere enveloped our going and coming, and chattering, sharp-tongued women became well following our every action with cautions and uncomprehending eyes, looking in our every word.

It was an atmosphere calculated either to inspire me, or to encourage our first timid attempt at friendship, but we persevered. Rewards were not lacking.

Miss Smith found that the shopkeepers could not understand the query: "Who is your boss?" When asked, "Who is the proprietor?" she replied: "The woman who keeps the shop." "Who do you keep milk in this store?" Miss Smith asked. "I have everything in this store but money," answered the woman.

Behind the street of Boston, according to the Federal authorities today, is a story of crime tainted during the illness of Mrs. Channell and after her death.

It was said today that these debts overwhelmed the assistant postmaster, and that when his creditors pressed him he took $200 of the government's money. Radcliffe tried manfully to pay the money back, but he continued to get more in debt.

MISS NELLIE FERGUSON, Cambridge girl fancy dancer of fifteen, who will give her first recital tomorrow evening. She has already won thirty medals.

Miss Ferguson will introduce several of her pupils in fancy dances in Cambridge.

Miss Nellie Ferguson, who has won a fine reputation in Boston and vicinity as a fancy dancer, will give her first recital in the City Hall, No. 40, Prospect st., Cambridge street, tomorrow evening.

Miss Ferguson is only fifteen years old, but she has already won thirty medals for dancing. She has been twice a time a teacher of dancing, and has many pupils.

The recital will introduce several of Miss Ferguson's pupils in clever dances. After the recital dancing will be enjoyed by the audience.

Miss Ferguson resides with her parents in Cambridge. She is particularly well known in Scottish circles, and has no superior as an exponent of Scottish dances.

BURNS TAKES UP THE MARTIN DEATH PUZZLE

LONDON, April 14.—William J. Burns, the famous American detective, today took charge of the search for Joseph W. Martin, the Memphis, Tenn., millionaire who has been missing since the night of Thursday, April 3, and who it is heard has been drowned.

"The thing to do now is to find the man," said Mr. Burns, after a conference with J. Leachman Anderson and Captain Prior, the two men with whom Martin shared the right of his disappearance.

The woman in the case referred to by the detective is the beautiful young Brazilian with whom Mr. Martin had an engagement the night of his disappearance.

Mr. Anderson, who has been working day and night in the search for his friend Martin, collapsed today. He got very tired, sleep since last Wednesday.

"I am giving all my faith to Burns," said Mr. Anderson upon leaving. "George, who joined up Martin's opium habit, and walked near Humberston bridge on the south side of the Thames on April 4, and the Memorial was ordered to cost $148,000."

The contract has not been exceeded. The original monument cost just $148,000. But the New York Art Commission, before granting it, the monument location in America, would not accept it.

BACKACHE A WARNING
ALL SHOULD HEED

It Is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected, Serious Diseases Follow

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and beat the blood pure. When they become clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying urinal disorders; have attacks or lumbago or

It is not only dangerous, but needless for you to suffer and endure the pain of kidney trouble until a new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

It is a fact that Croxone is already known for the prompt cure of all such troubles, because it remedies the cause of the trouble, cleans the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the clogged up pores, neutralizes the acids, removes the uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause the pain and stiffness. Croxone makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is so potent that it is possible to take it into the human system without results.

The Richest Man in Germany

He Has Sixty-three Million Dollars,
and Is Finding
Out That War
Costs Money—
A Very Good Thing

Above, dear readers, you see the face of a rich man who has made up his mind that war really IS hell.

He is the German Prince Von Donnersmark, his fortune is sixty-three millions of our money—and he is a mad prince just now.

You see the German Emperor has tacked many millions to the cost of war, and as the LITTLE people had been taxed all they could stand, the new tax is to be placed upon wealth.

The matter is handled exactly as though the country were at war, big fortunes have to pay their fair share, and this prince must pay a war tax of TWO AND A HALF MILLIONS. Translate that into German money and it makes ten million marks. You can imagine what a price thinks when he hears that HE must pay ten million marks at one time toward the expense of war.

It was not so in the good OLD times. Then, the little man paid and he went to war and was shot—the big man was exempt from taxes and he did not go to war unless he wanted to, and usually he was NOT shot.

What a fine and useful change to make the big man pay and to make him realize that war is expensive even to those that can afford it. The prince will think seriously about war from now on, and others with big fortunes, with or without titles, will do the same.

They'll find some way of bringing about peace if war continues to cost THEM so much.

For the rich men on the average are the intelligent and powerful men.

And intelligent and powerful men will find a way to stop war as soon as they learn that THEY must pay for the war game.

A Great Memorial to Patriotism Waits Upon $40,000

Our Citizens Will Not Allow the Maine Monument to Wait for the Last Touch of the Chisel for Many Times That Sum

The beautiful monument which commemorates the battleship Maine stands unfinished in one of the most sightly spots in the great metropolis of the Western World.

This fine tribute to our fighting ship and the 300 American sailors who together found their grave in the dark, unfriendly waters of the harbor of Havana, needs only forty thousand dollars to complete it.

Forty thousand dollars! The profits of a single prize fight! Of a single football game! The gate receipts of one baseball game! The cost of a few fashionable balls! The cost of a single gem that glitters a few times on the bosom of a fashionable woman and then wastes its brilliance in the "dark, unfathomed caves" of a safe deposit vault!

Our patriotic, rich and prodigal citizens will not allow this memorial of a great catastrophe and the beginning of events which increased our world-power and brought liberty, peace and decent government to millions of struggling people, to wait for the last touch of the sculptor's chisel, when it will cost but forty thousand dollars!

Standing in its conspicuous place as long as the Republic itself stands, every year it will jog the memory of hundreds of thousands of our countrymen concerning an important juncture of our nation's history.

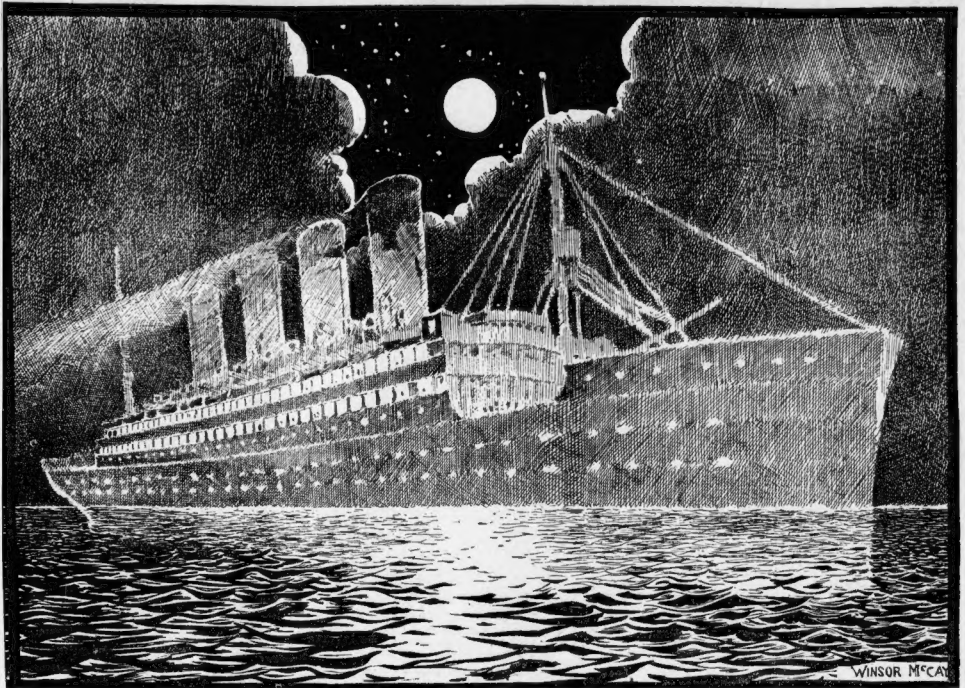

When it is completed, how many men and women who pass will it not turn for a moment from selfish thoughts of pleasure or gain, and remind them of the terrible disaster at Havana, and that their country has a great past, and that this past was watered with blood and sacrifice, which has made a great nation, that is worth preserving by the sacrifice also of a little of their own time and attention to its public affairs!

Shall we begrudge forty thousand dollars to such an inspiration to good citizenship, standing in the second greatest city of the world, tirelessly teaching for all time its lesson, in fair weather and foul, under the sun and the electric arc, by day and night?

William Randolph Hearst will contribute one dollar for every dollar that is raised by public subscription to complete this monument. Will you contribute a little something, Mr. Reader? Will it not be worth satisfaction to you the price of a ticket to one ball game this year?

If you will send your subscription, large or small, to the Cashier of the Boston American, at 50 Summer Street, Boston, it will be publicly acknowledged.

The Ship That Never Reached Port

One year ago to-day 1,503 lives were lost when the S.S. Titanic, bound for New York, struck an iceberg and sank. The Titanic was then the biggest ship in the world and was on her maiden voyage. Only 703 persons were saved in the ship's boats. Major Archibald Butt, Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus, Colonel John Jacob Astor, W. T. Stead and Jacques Futrelle were some of the heroes who gave up their lives to save others.

The Story of the Titanic—Lost a Year Ago Today

A YEAR ago the great passenger steamship Titanic, the highest achievement in palatial ocean architecture the world has ever known, went to the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean, with 1,503 men, women and children. Only 703 of the total company that left Southampton at noon April 10, 1912, were saved.

In many American and European cities anniversary ceremonies were held yesterday and today, and the Titanic Memorial Lighthouse Tower will be formally dedicated at New York tomorrow, when Bishop Greer and a notable company will take part in memorial services for the dead.

Never in the long story of the sea has such a disaster been recorded. For the number and prominence of the victims, the manner of the wrecking of the great ship and the vast treasure that the wreck cost, it stands without a fellow in the great list of marine accidents.

The world had never seen such an ocean palace as the Titanic. She was built for the White Star Line at a cost, including her furnishings, of $10,000,000. She lay in the water 82½ feet. Fifteen stories high she went from the keel, and her gross displacement was 66,000 tons. In her vast hull were staterooms fitted for kings, saloons and dining quarters that exhausted the art of the decorator; entertainment rooms and "playgrounds"—in fact, everything that fancy could suggest or money buy for the luxury and comfort of seagoing passengers able to pay the price. She had everything—

Except—

Lifeboats enough to take the passengers from this mammoth ship in the event of disaster. But sixteen of the frail life craft held place along her decks. There might have been more, but they would have taken up space needed for luxuries and for the latest fads and fancies of the sea. Built to give luxury to 2,500 souls, she was only equipped to save 1,500 of them in case of need.

That, in a nutshell, is the story of the human life cost of the appalling catastrophe. Fully in keeping with the character of the ship was the brilliant company on board. It was the maiden voyage of the great ship. She was to cross the ocean for the first time on a voyage that would be one to be read in the future history of the seas. Fashion, finance and science vied for place aboard on the maiden trial.

There was Colonel John Jacob Astor, multimillionaire, and his fair young bride, Isidor Straus, the millionaire merchant and philanthropist and his wife were aboard. Mr. and Mrs. George B. Widener of Philadelphia were on the list. Major Archibald W. Butt, personal aide to President Taft, was a passenger. Benjamin Guggenheim, of the millionaire smelting family, and his family were there. Clarence Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Harper, Washington A. Roebeling of the millionaire family that made the Brooklyn Bridge; Jacques Futrelle, the writer; William T. Stead, anti-trust journalist and publicist, of London; Francis D. Millet, one of the world's famous artists; J. B. Thayer, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Railroad; Henry B. Harris, the theatrical producer, and a score more of persons known internationally for wealth, social position or accomplishment in some important field, were included in the passenger list.

The jewels of the women alone were worth $5,000,000, as they stepped on board ship.

How, Scorning Warnings, They Flew to Their Death

With mirth and music and the most elaborate entertainment of the sea's whole calendar, this magnificent company, to say nothing of nearly 2,000 stowage passengers below decks, went speeding along at the highest rate. The Titanic was built for twenty-two knots an hour. She was out for a record. J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star Line, was aboard and he told Captain E. J. Smith to keep the ship up to the full way that she might hold her place for speed along with luxury.

Day after day the engines were called upon for more work. The number of revolutions increased. The propellers churned the water on Sunday night at 10 o'clock the ship was making all the time that was in her. There had come from the America during the day the wireless warning that "vagrants" were loitering along the northern route. The warning was received and forgotten. In the restaurants and dining rooms a brilliant company lingered late over the walnuts and the wine. In the card rooms the dice were being rolled in the drawing room the orchestra played, men and women danced and the noise was an operatic song came to aid to the pleasure of the evening. Captain

Smith had gone to the table as a dinner guest. The quartermaster on the bridge, at 11:40 o'clock heard the sudden cry of the man in the crow's nest: "Berg ahead!"

The End of It All, and "Women and Ismay First"

The screw was suddenly thrown to starboard. It was too late. The Titanic "side-swiped" a mammoth iceberg ahead with the full weight of her 66,000 tons. Masses, multiplied by velocity, the men of figures tell us, represents impact, and the top speed made the ship hit this mass of ice with the force of a blow of 1,161,000 foot tons. No armored ship, however thickly coated, could have stood that blow.

Yet there was small apparent shock.

The engines stopped, the water rushed into the boiler rooms, the bottom was ripped off. The "water tight" compartments supposed to be able to float the ship by the closing of bulkheads if an accident happened to any part of the ship, buckled and refused to close.

The Titanic was doomed. Half the company were asleep; the other half making merry. The women of the first and second class were hurried to the deck. Life preservers were strapped on them. The life boats were swung up. Men from the engine room, running like rats from a cage, seized one boat and put off. The order of the sea followed. It was women and children first. The order was generally obeyed. J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the line that owned the boat, was the notable and shining exception to the rule of the sea.

How the Heroes of This Great Disaster Died

Caught as so many animals, the steerage passengers were unable to get to the saving decks. Their story is told in the sentence. Colonel Astor escorted his bride of weeks to a life boat, retired and lit a cigarette to watch the work. Major Archibald Butt held the women in the boats and went back to his place on deck. Isidor Straus begged his wife to get in a boat while he remained. "We are old. We have lived together and we will die together," she said, and arm-in-arm they went back to meet their fate.

The story of the night grows monotonous with heroism. Henry B. Harris, Charles M. Hays, Widener, Thayer, William T. Stead, Benjamin Guggenheim, Washington Roebeling, Jacques Futrelle, and scores of other MEN joined the hero class.

Out in the sea the life boats tossed about with the 753 that made up the list of saved. Men fought to save themselves on rafts. They froze in the icy water. At 2:30 o'clock the great ship turned her stern into the air and went to the bottom. The life boats, hastily rowed out to avoid getting caught in the vortex and sucked under, watched the great ship as she went to her deep sea funeral. Then, without clothing, and without food, the miserable company, distracted with the sight of disaster and death, cruised in the open sea until there might come help.

The Rescue and How Carpathia Came to Save

Eighty miles away, Captain Arthur Henry Rooster of the Carpathia, got the wireless call. He turned his ship to the north, swung out his boats, had his great searchlight beam down, and clothing and went dashing to the rescue. Through the ice west his boat. An hour after the Titanic went to the bottom she floated down in a sea of ice to pick up the survivors.

It would take a volume to tell the details of the rescue. Congress summarized it in a vote of thanks and a gold medal for Rooster. The ship reached New York on the night of April 15 and the survivors and made her silent way up to the city while flags floated at half mast.

Then came the sending of undertaking ships from Halifax. The cable ship Mackay-Bennett cruised about the spot and picked up scores of bodies. Among them was the body of Colonel John Jacob Astor. After a week of search the search was abandoned. Ships passing the region reported seeing dead bodies on an iceberg along the northern track.

THE LONG SEAM

By MINNA IRVING

WHEN I am tired of daily tasks
That never seem to end,
I feel within my weary soul
The past and present blend.
The sunbeams of the long ago
Once more around me gleam,
I am a little girl again,
And stitching up a seam.
I hear the ancient clock tick-tack—
How slow the minutes go!
I run the needle in my thumb,
The thread—it tangles so.
The lilacs beckon at the door,
The blue-jeans nod and scream,
All bidding me come out to play
While stitching up the seam.
I often fancied as I sowed
The length of my life,
Was snowy silk or satin, wrought
With silver floss and vine.

And I was grown to womanhood,
And lovely as a dream,
And lo! upon my wedding dress
Was stitching up the seam.
But still my little back would ache,
Rebellious tears would fall;
The seam was, oh! so very long,
The stitches were so small!
But when I reached the bottom,
Then
A dish of fruit and cream,
Or slice of cake awaited me,
For stitching up the seam.
This life is like a seam that we
Too often try to shrink.
The seamstress's perfect work do
For stitching up the seam.
Upon our faithful work;
And when we finish it at last,
And cross the Jordan's stream,
The Lord will give us our reward
According to the seam.
